FEARFUL MORTALITY.

Rev. Dr. Joseph Parker of the City temple, London, once had a collection, to the announcement of which he added with deep pathoe: "Widows and orphans will not be expected to contribute."

A few Sundays later there was another collection for the same object.

"This time," said the preacher, "widows and orphans will not be exempt; for no battle ever made so many widows and orphans as the announcement made on the previous Sunday."

Dancing In the Old Days.

Dancing in the woods was the old manner in the classic times, and mythology tells of the worship thus paid by the pagans to the gods. The poets sang of it. The priests of Mars were the principal dancers in the sacred ing field for land investment than rites to that deity. There was also the religious dancing alluded to in the Old Testament, as where David danced before the ark to express his joy and that of his people, and there were the dances of the Drulds round the altars and the mysterious stones. Never, perhaps, in the history of the world was dancing more popular than it is today-not even in the pleasant times when in England. Ireland and France the people danced on the green. Oliver Goldsmith, traveling on foot, paid bis way by playing for the dancers on als flute.—Baltimore News.

Big Islands.

The four largest islands on the globe (leaving Australia out of the reckoning, as an "island continent" rather than an island in the ordinary sense of the word) are: New Guinea, $23,000 square miles; Borneo, 284,000; Madagascar, 227,000, and Sumatra, 162,000. There are no other islands that even approximate the "Big Four," Great Britain, the next largest, having only 83,000 square miles.
